

tado° Smart AC Control now widely available at major U.S. retailers

August 27th, 2015 - Following its successful U.S. launch, tech company tado° today announces the availability of its new Smart AC Control to American consumers through Amazon, Best Buy, B&H and many more retailers.

With its Smart AC Control, tado° makes remote-controlled air conditioners intelligent. It uses your smartphone's location to automatically adapt your air conditioner to your behavior. The geo-aware app on your phone senses when you leave the house and turns off the air conditioner. As soon as you start approaching home, tado° begins pre-cooling or pre-heating so you always come back to a comfortable house, without having to lift a finger. With its fully automatic climate control, tado° not only makes your home more comfortable, but also helps you save up to 40% on energy costs.

In partnership with specialist smart home distributor Global TTC, the tado° Smart AC Control is now available at Amazon, B&H, Build.com, Newegg.com and will shortly be available at BestBuy.com, Brookstone.com and Smarthome.com.

“Our growing partnerships with U.S. retailers allow us to bring our AC solution to more Americans,” says tado° CEO Christian Deilmann. “Together we will bring consumers a product that will save them money while increasing comfort and convenience.”

No matter where you are - on the commute, on holiday or at work - with the tado° app on your phone you always know what the temperature is at home and you can easily change the settings or set a schedule. The sleek and elegant tado° device blends into the ambience of your home, while offering a matrix LED display and capacitive touch interface for quick and easy manual adjustments.

Compatible with any remote-controlled wall-mounted, in-window, or portable AC unit, tado° is easy to set up. It connects to the air conditioner via infrared (IR) and links to the internet using your home's WiFi - no additional cabling needed. It can be mounted on a wall or placed on a surface.
